Gets 18 Cent Eggs From $4 House.

Prof. H. L. Kempster of the College of Agriculture, by experimenting with ten White Leghorn pullets in his back yard, obtained eggs during the winter months for 18 cents a dozen. Although the chicken house was only six feet square and cost only 4, it did not reduce production. Valuing the eggs at market price, the hens returned a profit of 50 cents each above the cost of feeding. Professor Kempster says that the longer the hens are kept the lower the cost of the feeding will be.
